'Estate viticulture is very traditional, integrated with the environment, without using subscribers of synthesis or irrigation. Nature is who gives the desired balance to the grapevine.'

Saez-Olazabal's José Manuel's (of Bodegas y Viñedos Alzania) 'second' line of wines from Navarra that are named after his wife Maria Saez-Olazabal. This lovely couple are both oenologists, and together they create unbelievable quality wines in their small bodega together. A label that focuses on value driven, yet very quality fruit, the Gardacho tier has been an absolute success with their exciting packaging and extraordinary estate juice. This line of wines takes the same philosophy that Alzania does, with minimal farming practices, and a soft hand in the cellar, in order to show off just how good Jose Manuel is at what he does in one of the most unique regions of Spain. The estate rests in the western sub-zone of Navarra, called Tierra Estella, where the famous trail of Camino de Santiago cuts through several of their vineyard plots.

Saez-Olazabal's Gardacho takes its name from a mythical dragon/lizard creature that the local children enjoy telling stories of. It is made from an average of 40-year-old vine Garnacha fruit that is fermented in both concrete vats and stainless steel to retain the bright character of the grape. It spent 8 months in old giant French oak vats for a beautiful development before bottling. This wine's freshness and exuberance is absolutely stunning! Bright red fruits shoot out of the glass, but with no lack of spicy tones to accompany it. Its lifted acidity on the palate exemplifies the berries and peppery notes and makes for an absolute delight to have in the mouth. So well-balanced and cleanly made, this red can be perfect with a slight chill for summer time drinking on the patio, or sit next to grilled meats and vegetables at the table.
