

Quinta do Montalto 'Vinha da Malhada' Reserva

(VR Lisboa)

Touriga Nacional, Syran, Baga, Trincadeira, Castelão, Aragonez

The Vinha da Malhada Reserva takes its name from a 3.5-hectare vineyard of the estate where much of this fruit comes from. It is a blend of some Syrah and several local varieties, all of which were brought into the cellar for a natural fermentation in 5 and 10 thousand liter stainless steel tanks. Once the fermentations were over, the wine aged for 6 months in large neutral oak barrels from France and America, before it was bottled and ready for the release to the market after a month. The color is a dark ruby with amazingly savory aromatic tones, backed by ripe fruit and spice. This blend comes together on the palate with loads of dark fruit, forest brush, and peppery spice, with fresh acidity and soft tannins.

Bon Vivant

Quinta do Montalto 'Vinha da Malhada' Reserva

(VR Lisboa)

Touriga Nacional, Syran, Baga, Trincadeira, Castelão, Aragonez

The Vinha da Malhada Reserva takes its name from a 3.5-hectare vineyard of the estate where much of this fruit comes from. It is a blend of some Syrah and several local varieties, all of which were brought into the cellar for a natural fermentation in 5 and 10 thousand liter stainless steel tanks. Once the fermentations were over, the wine aged for 6 months in large neutral oak barrels from France and America, before it was bottled and ready for the release to the market after a month. The color is a dark ruby with amazingly savory aromatic tones, backed by ripe fruit and spice. This blend comes together on the palate with loads of dark fruit, forest brush, and peppery spice, with fresh acidity and soft tannins.

Bon Vivant

Quinta do Montalto 'Vinha da Malhada' Reserva

(VR Lisboa)

Touriga Nacional, Syran, Baga, Trincadeira, Castelão, Aragonez

The Vinha da Malhada Reserva takes its name from a 3.5-hectare vineyard of the estate where much of this fruit comes from. It is a blend of some Syrah and several local varieties, all of which were brought into the cellar for a natural fermentation in 5 and 10 thousand liter stainless steel tanks. Once the fermentations were over, the wine aged for 6 months in large neutral oak barrels from France and America, before it was bottled and ready for the release to the market after a month. The color is a dark ruby with amazingly savory aromatic tones, backed by ripe fruit and spice. This blend comes together on the palate with loads of dark fruit, forest brush, and peppery spice, with fresh acidity and soft tannins.

Bon Vivant

Quinta do Montalto 'Vinha da Malhada' Reserva

(VR Lisboa)

Touriga Nacional, Syran, Baga, Trincadeira, Castelão, Aragonez

The Vinha da Malhada Reserva takes its name from a 3.5-hectare vineyard of the estate where much of this fruit comes from. It is a blend of some Syrah and several local varieties, all of which were brought into the cellar for a natural fermentation in 5 and 10 thousand liter stainless steel tanks. Once the fermentations were over, the wine aged for 6 months in large neutral oak barrels from France and America, before it was bottled and ready for the release to the market after a month. The color is a dark ruby with amazingly savory aromatic tones, backed by ripe fruit and spice. This blend comes together on the palate with loads of dark fruit, forest brush, and peppery spice, with fresh acidity and soft tannins.

Bon Vivant

Quinta do Montalto 'Vinha da Malhada' Reserva

(VR Lisboa)

Touriga Nacional, Syran, Baga, Trincadeira, Castelão, Aragonez

The Vinha da Malhada Reserva takes its name from a 3.5-hectare vineyard of the estate where much of this fruit comes from. It is a blend of some Syrah and several local varieties, all of which were brought into the cellar for a natural fermentation in 5 and 10 thousand liter stainless steel tanks. Once the fermentations were over, the wine aged for 6 months in large neutral oak barrels from France and America, before it was bottled and ready for the release to the market after a month. The color is a dark ruby with amazingly savory aromatic tones, backed by ripe fruit and spice. This blend comes together on the palate with loads of dark fruit, forest brush, and peppery spice, with fresh acidity and soft tannins.

Bon Vivant

Quinta do Montalto 'Vinha da Malhada' Reserva

(VR Lisboa)

Touriga Nacional, Syran, Baga, Trincadeira, Castelão, Aragonez

The Vinha da Malhada Reserva takes its name from a 3.5-hectare vineyard of the estate where much of this fruit comes from. It is a blend of some Syrah and several local varieties, all of which were brought into the cellar for a natural fermentation in 5 and 10 thousand liter stainless steel tanks. Once the fermentations were over, the wine aged for 6 months in large neutral oak barrels from France and America, before it was bottled and ready for the release to the market after a month. The color is a dark ruby with amazingly savory aromatic tones, backed by ripe fruit and spice. This blend comes together on the palate with loads of dark fruit, forest brush, and peppery spice, with fresh acidity and soft tannins.

Bon Vivant